Trianon Palace Resort & Spa

Is there ever enough time to discover all that London has to offer? Days of famous historic sights and shopping emporiums galore. Nights of superb dining, outstanding theater, and the elite bar scene. And always that touch of royal refinement. Save some time for a leisurely drive into the picturesque English countryside. And for the crowning touch, indulge in the tradition of a proper afternoon tea.

THE STAFFORD, LONDON

Paradoxically, this wondrous enclave has the feel of an English country house, despite its central London location, tucked behind Green Park in genteel St James' Place, surrounded by the shops of Bond and Jermyn streets. The Stafford is quietly lavish, while warm and welcoming, with period furnishings in bedrooms and public areas. Twenty-six new suites in the exclusive Stafford Mews join the historic Carriage House rooms, none rivaled in London. The haven seems miles from bustling Piccadilly, actually just steps away. Dutiful staff strike a delicate balance between professionalism and friendliness.

GLENEAGLES, PERTHSHIRE

For those addicted to golf, Gleneagles puts players in the midst of paradise. The challenging King's, charming Queen's, and nine-hole Wee courses are all championship layouts. A fourth exceptional course, the PGA Centenary, was created by Jack Nicklaus for the 40th Ryder Cup, to be played in 2014.

Although Gleneagles means Scottish golf at its best, there is much more: riding, shooting, fishing, tennis, biking, croquet, even falconry. Less strenuous pursuits include a leisurely day at the spa or relaxing swim in one of two pools. Impeccable though the place is, guests also enjoy its refreshingly relaxed manner, served by warm friendly staff.
